The Underdog Story of Big Heart Mike Papale

Mike Papale was a 30-year-old bartender and school teacher when he was discovered by the Philadelphia Eagles and given a chance to play in the NFL. He quickly became a fan favorite, thanks to his heart, determination, and underdog story.

Papale was born in Chester, Pennsylvania, in 1947. He was a gifted athlete, but he never played football in high school or college. After graduating from college, he worked as a bartender and a school teacher. In 1976, he decided to try out for the Philadelphia Eagles. He was a long shot, but he impressed the coaches with his heart and determination. He was signed to the team as a special teams player.

Papale quickly became a fan favorite. He was known for his hard hits and his never-say-die attitude. He played for the Eagles for four seasons, and he helped the team reach the Super Bowl in 1980. After his playing career, Papale worked as a motivational speaker and a television commentator.

Papale's story is an inspiration to anyone who has ever been told that they can't achieve their dreams. He shows that anything is possible if you have the heart and determination to succeed.

Papale's Impact on the Philadelphia Eagles

Papale was a fan favorite during his time with the Philadelphia Eagles. He was known for his hard hits and his never-say-die attitude. He was also a great teammate and a leader on the field.

Papale's impact on the Eagles went beyond his playing ability. He helped to change the culture of the team. He showed that anyone can achieve their dreams if they have the heart and determination to succeed. He also helped to make the Eagles a more popular team in Philadelphia.

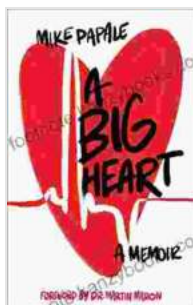

Papale's legacy continues to this day. He is still remembered as one of the most popular players in Eagles history. He is also a role model for many young people who dream of playing in the NFL.
